FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Gainesville Resident Kevin Schultz Elected to Crow Canyon Archaeological Center Board

(CORTEZ, Colo.)—November 1, 2011—The Crow Canyon Archaeological Center today announced that Gainesville resident Kevin Schultz was elected to the Center’s Board of Trustees. Crow Canyon is a not-for-profit research and education organization located in southwestern Colorado.

“Kevin has an extensive background as a global business leader,” said Crow Canyon President and CEO Deborah Gangloff. “We look forward to his contributions to our board as we move forward into the next decade.”

“I decided to join Crow Canyon because of its mission and dedication to exploring an important part of our past,” Schultz said. “The Center’s commitment to sharing knowledge of our history and broadening our insights into a fascinating period of cultural development will continue to benefit current and future generations. During my recent visit there, it was easy to see and feel the passion of the Crow Canyon team. You could see it in their faces and hear it in their voices. I wanted to be associated with such an organization and look forward to getting started.”

During his 30 years in the payments industry, Schultz held leadership positions with Visa, including executive vice president of client services and general manager for Visa Debit Processing, LLC. He also served as global head of Visa processing services for Visa Inc. He most recently served as president of financial services for First Data, a transaction-processing company, with responsibility for card issuing, debit services, the STAR Network, output services, government and education markets and analytic and decision services products. He retired in January 2011.

Schultz holds a bachelor’s degree from the University of Wisconsin and a master’s degree from the School of International Affairs at Columbia University.

The not-for-profit Crow Canyon Archaeological Center, located near Cortez, Colorado, conducts long-term, multidisciplinary research into the ancestral Pueblo Indians of the southwestern United States and provides experiential education programs for adults and children. The Center also collaborates with American Indians on a wide variety of initiatives of mutual interest, including research projects, education curricula, and language- and cultural-preservation programs. Crow Canyon’s Board of Trustees is made up of individuals from across the nation who volunteer their time, talent, and resources to the Center.
