

BRIDGING CULTURES: DIVERSITY AND UNITY IN THE PUEBLO WORLD

June 24–July 14, 2012

Three-Week Summer Institute for K–12 educators and graduate students

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT FOR EDUCATORS

HOSTED BY THE CROW CANYON ARCHAEOLOGICAL CENTER • CORTEZ, CO

Funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities

Join us at the Crow Canyon Archaeological Center in southwestern Colorado for an extraordinary professional–development opportunity for educators. The program is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) which provides stipends to cover all expenses. The faculty will include educators, archaeologists, and American Indian scholars.

Focus:

- Anthropology and the concepts of culture and diversity
- Pueblo culture and history
- Pueblo cultural and linguistic diversity, and the consequences of interaction among diverse groups
- The long–term interaction between Pueblo people and their environment, including how they responded to climate change
- Depopulation and migration and the connection between the Pueblo past and present

CROW CANYON
ARCHAEOLOGICAL CENTER
Discover the Past, Share the Adventure

For more information: Visit www.crowcanyon.org/NEHsummer2012, e-mail NEHsummer2012@crowcanyon.org, or call 970.564.4346.

To Apply: Application deadline is March 1, 2012. Prospective applicants can access more information and the online Participant Application Cover Sheet on the NEH Web site: www.neh.gov/projects/index.html.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE Humanities

Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed in this program do not necessarily reflect those of the National Endowment for the Humanities.